I understand Javascript is designed to manipulate the DOM for what it was designed for, but is it only used for that? For instance, is it possible to use it to encrypt a string? If a user types their password in a text box and the JS is grabbing their password from the DOM and encrypts the textbox, would that be considered insecure? A: No, JavaScript is not only used for the DOM manipulation. You can manipulate data with JavaScript and it's perfectly secure. Javascript is not a "client side" language in the sense that it's client side. "client side" means "in the browser". JavaScript is server side. What you said is not correct. A: Javascript is a client side language, but it's used for server side activities as well. From Javascript is not a Web application scripting language like ASP or PHP. Instead, Javascript is a programming language designed to work in a Web browser, such as Internet Explorer, Netscape

- The AXURE RP Pro Plugin is a part of the popular professional tool for designing and creating interactive prototypes and also works great with the Axure Studio Professional. - Powerful Interface and Wizard-based creation for simple & advanced content creation. - XForms, MathML, SVG, PNG, Bitmap and JPG support; You can add as much or as little content as you like. - Intuitive drag & drop interface for all features with convenient navigation; - Web authoring and documentation included. Batch 2.5.0 A strongly typed.NET component to manipulate any XML file. It contains functions for parsing, manipulating, transforming, serializing and deserializing any XML document. It's based on a strong typed framework with methods and properties to simplify and create the XML document manipulation. Batch 2.4.0 A highly customizable and easy to use batch processing tool for the.NET framework. It has been developed from scratch for the development of batch projects which, in the simplest case, are programs that are run automatically at a certain point in time (e.g. daily). The method of execution is identical to Windows Services in that it runs in a separate process with its own command window and communicates to the main process using Windows Event Handlers. The advantages of this system is that all updates to your program will not require a restart of your batch process and that you can easily create services that will run in the background without interfering with other batch programs. Batch 2.3.1 This is a well-designed batch framework that consists of simple methods for easy XML manipulation, and helps to make this task quick and easy. The framework contains the following methods for XML processing and manipulation: - ConvertToXml method, which converts the data from a source to XML. - ParseFromXml method, which converts the XML to the data. - UpdateXml method, which updates an XML document. - GetProperty method, which returns the value of a property of an object. - SetProperty method, which sets the value of a property of an object. - GetProperties method, which returns all the properties of an object. - SetProperties method, which sets the properties of an object. - LoadFromXml method, which loads an XML document from a file. - WriteToXml method, which writes the XML document to a file. - SaveTo 77a5ca646e
