IfosAndDowhattheanswertrueFalseQ: How to escape $ using cmd.exe? I'm trying to escape the backslash character in Windows cmd.exe so that I can run another program from a batch file. Here's the batch file @echo off SET PATH=%PATH%;C:\Program Files\Console Games\Infection\x86\console\bin\ start xcmain ( I know that the path is wrong, but I am not the author of the batch file so I can't change it). When I run the batch file, I get the error: "xcl.exe" is not recognized as an internal or external command, operable program or batch file. I don't know how to escape the $ character. Is there a way to escape it, or is there a better way to write this batch file? A: Use ^ instead of $: set PATH=%PATH%;C:\Program Files\Console Games\Infection\x86\console\bin\ So it will become: set "PATH=%PATH%;C:\Program Files\Console Games\Infection\x86\console\bin;" A: I would suggest not to use batch files for this task. In view of the disposition of the motions of the other defendants, the United States' motion is hereby rendered moot. [2] In the event that plaintiff's federal claims are dismissed in their entirety, the Court would still retain jurisdiction over plaintiff's remaining state law claims. [3] In fact, the record is devoid of any evidence that defendants were aware that plaintiff was a handicapped person.
